"Eleanor Jones Dies at Home" is a February,1970, headline.

"Miss Eleanor Pritchard Jones, 86, of 14 Darte Avenue, Carbondale, died Friday at home after an illness.

"Born in Carbondale, daughter of the late Alderman Samuel Jones and the former Margaret Russell, she was a graduate of Carbondale High School and Blair Academy, Blairstown, N.J. She was trained for work with deaf children at the Pennsylvania State Oral School, Scranton, where she taught 52 years. For several years she served as supervisor of that institution. She retired in 1954."

A May 11 Tribune headline reads, "Pupils Honored at Oral School."

"The Pennsylvania Oral School for the Deaf, Scranton, held its annual 'Spring Festival' in the school gymnasium and classrooms Sunday afternoon.

"The festival, initiated by Miss Helen O'Donnell, school superintendent, featured presentation of awards to students who made outstanding contributions in a variety of categories."

Another death is recorded, this time in November. "Helen Bissell Is Dead; Noted for Social Work." She had served as principal of the oral school from 1954 to 1956.

Money and a new building make news in 1971: "Oral School to build $1.188 Million Annex."

"A $1.188,386 grant for construction of a building at the Pennsylvania State Oral School for the Deaf here has been made by the State Department of Education. Constuction is expected to begin in the fall.

"The building will house 60 students, although there will be educational facilities for 100 students included. Other features will be five classrooms, recreational facilities, kitchen and dining room sections, technical areas for deaf children and offices and equipment rooms. The structure will be behind the school grounds at the corner of N. Washington Ave. and Electric St."

"Nine Graduate at Oral School" is a June headline.

"The Pennsylvania State Oral School for the Deaf held its annual commencement exercises Tuesday night followed by a reception for graduates.

"Magdalena Bonchack, John Denius, Darlene Doebler, Linda Fish, Susan Grabowski, David Labzentis, Joanna Maffei, Lynn Kay Miller, and Ann May Runyon were presented with certificates by H. Elizabeth Williams, education director.

"Wesley R. White, M.D., vice president of the board of trustees, presided at the program which included an address by Miss Clara Hamel, language specialist and former principal of the Rochester (N.Y.) School for the Deaf.
